A note from ALAW

This Winter/Summer edition of the Journal for Animal Welfare Law covers diverse subject areas.

Joanne Sellick and Jason Lowther discuss whether the forthcoming Directive 2010/63/EU will improve the protection of animals used in research. Sally Case looks at sentencing in relation to animal cruelty using two tragic cases prosecuted by the RSPCA as examples. Peter Stevenson provides a briefing on two important regulatory instruments affecting farm animals. Paula Sparks and Dominika Flindt give a round up case law, other materials and news updates. Bridget Martin explores the on-going issue of Badgers and Bovine Tuberculosis. Chris Draper discusses how effective the licensing and inspection of zoos, under the Zoo Licensing Act 1981, is in supporting the welfare of zoo animals.

I hope you enjoy this issue. If you have ideas for further content please do get in touch.
